KANSAS.

KANSAS CITY, November 5 .- The rebublican candidate for governor is beaten, six out of seven republican congressional candidates defeated, Senator lngal's' re election a subject of grave gress in the Tenth. doubt. That is the situation in Kansas. There was a land side, a regular avaanche in Kansas. Eighty-two thousand republican majority was overwielmed by its resist ess force and buried beneath its destructive weight. The Farmers' Alliance die it, and it was a genuine surprise. Every political problet precicted great strength for the aliance, year; and 17 to 19 senators, against in but only the most sanguine of the rura. seers regarded its success as even a proban my on the evening of the election chosen to any lesser state office since the Sixth congressional district. Republication appropriately, Robinson, democrat, a list year of republican administration, cans probably carry the Centuliane. a propability, Robinson, democrat, a possibility, and Wilets, Farmers' Alliance, not in it. To day the returns, practically complete, land Wilets the winder, with Humphrey and Robinson neck and neck for the place.

The republicans ose six out seven congressmen, and there is another surprise For the first time in many years the republicance egation is broken, and broken to fragments. Only one republican escaped the wreek, and that was Jon Z ... Funston, rom the Second district. The remocrats were successful and phenomenally so, in the First district electing Taos, Moonligat over Case Broderick, republican, by 10, 000 majority. clon. E. N. Morri', republican, the present incumbent, nee inca the nomination in this district. Tae l'armers' A. iauce carried the other five districts, electing C over over Personal time democrats. Thomas, republican, for congress in the Pairc; Otis over Me y in the congress in the Seventeenth, is defeated; Fourta: Davis over Pail ips, republican, in the Fifth; Baser over Webb EcNa in the Sixta, and Simpson over Ea. owe... in the Seventh. The Kansas delegation will stand, republicans, democrats, Farmers' Alliance 5.

Another surprise lies in the possible defeat for re-c ection of Senator luga a, whose term expires in 1891. Farmers' alliance and the democrats. waged a bitter cambaign agains; him; in a majority of the districts combined on one of their candidates against he republican cancidate. The result is the certain election of 95 Farmers' a lance and democratic legislators against 30 republicans. Some of the latter may vote for Ingalls, but als opposition claim tast those now elected who oppose him, together with the opposition ho dovers, wil give sure y nine votes or a majority of six against aim. This now looks to be a correct statement of Xr. Logal.s' situation, but it is liable to modification.

Copyright, 1890, by Edgar W. Nye. Wancering about the other day and waiting for Otero to come forth and cance at the Eden Musee, the manager said, all of a sudden, as he noticed that I was being mistaken for a new wax figure, and hist I seemed emparrassed by the way people, especially strangers, were feeling of me and wondering if I were hollow: "Come up stairs with me. I want to show you something. Did you ever go into the work room where wax figures are made?"

"We ... take the elevator with me. Otero will not cance yet for an hour and you can see the whole business—studio, work saon, etc.-in that time, and you will enjoy it just as much as you would remaining here with that vacant and guileless look, being constantly taken for Henry Irving or the deathbed of Na-20. eop. '

So I said yes we would go. I had never watched the process, and very few people, as I understood it, were permitted to go into the mysterious chambers where great men were made and unmade even quicker than the newspapers could do it. The principal works -wax works, I may say, or tableaux foundry - would seem to be facing Twenty-third street, one floor above the entrance. Quite a number of people are busy there all the time acking new figures and tableaux to the great collection in the halfs below. Every time a monarch croaks and a new president is elected the genius of the wax sculptor up there is called into use, and before you know it the head of the new republic, in a neat fitting suit of clothes, is inserting his nice pink hand into the bosom of his frock coat and trying to look far away, will o people are watching him earnestly in the great group of potentates.

was arst introduced to the main wax worker and artist of the whole estabishment, whose name I wish I had secured, because he was so courbeous and obliging. He showed me all about it, so that I could now do it myself if at any time I should decide to retire fromiterary pursuits and give myse." up enhirely to art.

The artist of whom I speak makes neads and hands and finishes up the job, while another arist, whose name I did not get accurately enough to print, unless could at once escape, makes the bodies. The process is very simple inceed. Anybody could do it. It is as easy as running a paper or perfecting the tariff so as to be generally agrees ble. The sculptors were working on a group of Caristopher Columbus. The artist has seized upon the happy moment when Columbus is just about to discover America, and he is deparing in his own mind whether or not there is anything in it. One can see readily by his deep, earnest look that it is a problem in his brain which he has not yet settled whether it will pay him to discover a country waica will introduce the use of plug tobacco and freedom.

Columbus was at this time very poor. First he had sought to secure a concession from the legislature of Spain, but in Spain it costs as much to get a just appropriation as it does in Albany. He went on to show that if he did not discover America some one else would, and that the result would be that some less deserving and far plainer man would ge, his pictures on the American greenpacks. But poon! poon! said the legislature, seeing that Columbus had no means with which to promote legislative action, and he being a plain man, entirely ignorant of whether a bill had to go to its lina. passage or over to the Smithsonian Institution, was guyed and fooled with by men who should have known better until his money was gone, and our less indian tribes were waiting impatiently all the time to be discov-

"Alas!" some great chie! would say after vainly searching the norizon, "another day has went by and my people remain undiscovered. My great speeca, to the pale race, which I have prepared for the Fourth Reader, is shill in manuscript form. Day after day goes by and we get no reliable European news. Bah."

Ee would then eat a light breakfast of maize, get married, and taking his cross gun on his shoulder go out and shoot s canvasback muskrat for his innedeon. Columbus, as he will appear at the Ecen Musee, has a car't but Deasant face and pleasant whisters. I took his head in my hand and looked into his steady, gentle

Some were kneeling, some were knor, lecause 17 is so pure and las suca standing and some were in other attitudes that would have looked heroic if the drapery had, been a little more extensive. The pocies and limbs are made as follows: First they are modeled in diay man-when she heard a heavy footfail in the position exactly that they are to assume when completed. Then the mold is made from this and then the wax is put in first, followed by a heavy coarse cloth, three thicknesses of which are used to give strength and firmness of character to the subject. A acy was engaged in cressing the figure of Columbus. She attends to the costuming of all the wax people. She. was just outling a wad of excelsior into his bosom as I entered. Another young lacy has the somewhat monotonous for of putting on the hair and whisters, one at a time. Many think that the wax works wear wigs, out this is not true, Each hair is our into the wax by means of a little steel jabber, and the wax pressed down again to hold it. It haves three days to but the hair on a man like, Lisz, or Ole Bull. In getting up a figure of Co., Ingersol of course one day would be ample. In the Columbus group there is one sailor who has not shaved for a week. This is effected by putting the beard in full, and then clipping it to the proper length. He looks quite lifelize, and has irregular teeth which, with his sandy, studby beard, give him a regular sea Log loos.

Ferdinand will be represented also. saw his bust in beeswax. He was rather a plain man with a look of anxiety which I artributed to a feeling of uncertainty about the time when his new closies would reach him from Grand street. Ferdinand rescued nimse. from on ivion by giving his hand in marriage to Isabella of Castile on the 18th of Occoper, 1469. Five years later, Ferdinand was proclaimed king on the death of Henry IV, who was Isabella's prother. It is said that her folks opposed the marriage on the ground that Ferd could not give the necessary bonds even if he got the office of ring; but he did, and probable. You will be surprised. gave good satisfaction.

In 1492 Ferdinand Crove al 720 Jews out of his cominion because they would not advertise in a paper with which he was connected. It was in this same year that Isabel a fitted out two of the three ships necessary for Columbus to go in and discover America, and when he returned Ferdinand and Isabella obtained abuil from Pope Alexander confirming their title to all the territory they had then or might thereafter discover in the western hemisphere. So Fercinand and sapela had quite a lot of wid land for sale at the close of that year, which if they had kept would now be very valnable. Take Minneapolis and New York, for instance; both of these towns were then in their infancy, and the ground was cleap. Take the land, for instance, on which Trinity cource and Daly's billiard hall now stand. These of are now works millions of collars. and yet a few years ago they were secured by planting the Spanish fag on our coast or buying a state of the improvident red man with a schooner of okay wine and a red carnelian nose ring.

Isabella's bust as it will appear in this great historical ableau will have a brunevie appearance with black hair. She wi have a far of look and lo ow egs. She was having her measure taken for a throne on the day I visited her. Isabella died Nov. 28, 1504, and Ferdinand, after pawing up she garth with his tumultuous grief and making a perfect slow of himself at the grave, proceeded to marry Germaine De Foix. New York, Oct. 50.-Zew places are better wor's knowing-and therefore, of course, few are less known-lan Those strange little hermitages of the Incian ocean marked on our maps as the Laccacive and Maldive islands. The channel which passes between the two groups forms a kind of marine Broadway, through which vessels of all nations pass by hundreds and thousands every year. The four chief islands of the faccacive archipelago (the name of which signifies "100,000 islands", viz.: Ameni, Karamut, Kilton and Chitac. have actually belonged to England since 1799, and the others are claimed by the Rance or Beebee of Cannanore (a Eincoo princess under British protection), while the Maldive group has a large trade with the west coast of India itself. But I have never met, even among travelers. one man who had ever landed on these islands, or seemed to mow or care anything about them.

And yet both groups are well worth seeing, more especially the Maldives, which are somewhat the more civilized of the two. The nineteen "arolls" or coral groups are all on the same pattern. viz., a circular reef of white coral, in-Closing a smooth, shallow lagoon studded with tiny balm crested islets. Some of these rise parely six feet above the three scents make one colog. surface, while many others are actually "awash," so that a ship may run her bow aground on them with 100 fathoms of water beneath her stern. In fact, the Maleive atolis are best described by imagining a submerged group of extinet volcanoes, pure white instead of black, with their craters just above the sea, and a few islands foating in them like toa leaves in a cup.

When the novelists of the future have exhausted the whole world as now existing, they can still avail themselves of some new islet created by the unseen 'abors of the coral insect. Month after month, year after year, the tiny mason builds up his wall of stony howers and leaves from the unknown Cenths below til it reaches the surface of the sea. Revend this he cannot go, but other innuences are at hand to complete his work. Every wave, every storm casts something upon the new foundation. Simple mosses and liquens grow and die, gradually spreading over the pare coral an ever growing layer of vegetable soil. Cocoa unts stranded on it by the sea and seeds let fail by passing birds strike root in the soil thus prepared and the once pare and nameless reef takes rank among the islands of the world.

Eere, even more fully than in hackneved islands of the Pacific, one may realize Tennyson's visions of the "summer is es of Eden." The inventive African savage who provided himself at one stroke with clothes, food and shelter by charping on his head the upper half of a giant watermelon, sitting in the lower half and enting the inside, is surpassed in his own line by the average Malaivian citizen. You and ripo fruit showering down upon you from the trees, ecliple roots starting up under your feet, fish literally "shouldherin" aich other out of the wather," like the Trish salmon, and "warm baths ready at all hours" in the clear, oright, glassy waters of the agoon. When the coming of Sunday or some great public festival reminds you to put on some clothes for once in a way, a mat of twisted palm fiber will equip you in the height of Malcivian fashion and save you from the vulgar estentation of a cozzon or calico waisteloth. You will tind no difficulty in securing a country villa consisting of four poles and a mat, admirably ventilated, and liable only to inconvenience of being sometimes absent without leave when you come back to it after a nigh wind. Here you may be happy, for mosquitoes there are none, the only ones ever known of the island having been due to the vengéance of an American szipper, who left on an islet with whose people he had quarreled a cask of half stagnant water, which speedily produced mos ruitoes enough to "make it not" for the whole of the offending community. Now and then, indeed, you may find a colony of lively ants having a picnic in your nammods, or a big, spotted snake literally "cropping in upon you" from the palm leaf factor overhead. But in the main you will be far snugger there than in many hotels which I have seen in Malacca or Sumatra, where the floors are only washed when the river rises. and the tallecloth is changed once a vear-on the land ord's pirtheav. When you feel disposed to call on your next coor neig abor—i. e., the inhabitant of the nearest islet-you are pretty safe to find him "at home," unless he should nappen to go out ashing, and even then you can generally descry him somewhere in the offing and signal to him to come back. And then, if you have a spare mile or, hatches to barter for his fresh rish, you may combine business with pleasure by coing a little private rading while improving your acquaintance with the Malcivian dialect, which is most perplexingly different from the languages of Ceylon and the Indian mainland and indeed from every other language that you have ever learned.

When the storms of the rainy season come on you can amuse yourself by sirring indoors and watching the shipwrecks, and when the time comes for the yearly departure of the tracing fleet to the Malabar coast of India you are regaled with a spectacle even more striking: All along the sea line there certies velore your eyes a seemingly endless procession of buggalows native small craft), which, with their high sterns and low hows, ook ust as if they were going cown head oremos.
